He was a disciple of Gaetano Donizetti and several works influenced by the composer's style were well received at the Vienna Court Opera. As a pianist he was well regarded as a virtuoso, and he taught and composed for the piano. The opera was a great success and caused a sensation in its day, giving its author international fame. He also composed songs and wrote music for operettas. His first operetta, Läng' den Römern (1843), was a success and became the favourite of the Wiener Tonkünstler-Societät. He followed this with L' Arianna (1846) and Die Uhrentafel (1849). His opera Der Fast (The Fast) was a success, even though its libretto was by Ferdinand Lassalle. He was a popular and well liked teacher of pianoforte-playing. References This article is based on a translation of the German Wikipedia article Klose; see there for more information.
