In the 21st century, access to advanced driving technologies like self-driving cars presents a huge paradigm shift in the way we move from one location to another. Because this technology is still in its early phases, most people believe that the future of driving will be a comfortable ride in a car that will be a consumer's new toy. The School Fab Lab Self-Driving App delivers a fun learning experience that helps you to understand self-driving technology and its potential implications in your everyday life. You will play as a driver in a virtual environment with the option of interacting with machines, much like you would in the real world, but you'll be driving a car that does not need a driver. As you navigate, you will be able to advance the self-driving process by choosing different types of cars, driving different routes and learning to identify other road users. Eventually, you'll be able to customize your driver's car with your own features and be able to integrate your own path-planning algorithm. The path-planning algorithm will be either an algorithm you have chosen to design it or one of the pre-programmed algorithms provided by the app. The School Fab Lab Self-Driving App allows you to: - Take charge of a self-driving vehicle - Enjoy what it feels like to drive - Learn about self-driving technology - Get your students involved in the process - Induct students into the process of designing their own self-driving car This book is an engaging, student

Chapter Chapter 1 I am beyond excited that today we have exclusive access to the first chapter of LOGISTICAL 2: Vampires. I have been completely blown away by the extent that LOGISTICAL 2 has taken so far. I love their attention to detail, especially that they do extensive research for their projects. Do not hesitate to contact them if you like their work! Alright, let's see what is going on in this chapter in the dialogue section. Noah asked to sit here. Please sit? Yes, thank you. Can I get you something to drink? No, I am fine. I would like to not drink alcohol or eat anything. I am fine. Do you have any pets? Uh, no. He shook his head, not really feeling like telling him that. I am sorry. No worries. Noah was a man who did not like to talk, but he felt the need to. He had been doing this since the beginning and he would definitely never change it. Riley gave a sigh, and she liked talking to Noah. At first she used to try to talk with him about her life and troubles that she encountered on a daily basis, but then he would not listen. Talking about his problems made him feel a lot better, just like he did talking to Andrea. After a week together they got used to their relationship and it felt nice to be able to talk to someone on a regular basis. They shared the same priorities and religion, so after a few days they got to know each other pretty well. They already understood each other's characters and they knew what they were capable of when it came to other things. They were both sober, so there was no problem talking about anything. Their faith meant that they did not go against their beliefs and the things they wanted in life - so it was okay to be friends and talk about anything that could possibly sound weird. Just talking to someone you could tell everything to felt great. Riley was a kid who had a lot of respect for the other religions, who thought that for people of all different religions to find love you had to be of the same faith. But she didn't mind talking about things with people of other faiths and seeing if there was any interest for people who did not share the same religion.

Talking to Noah, she could tell there was a boy
