In the film Silence, what does "something to keep both of us busy" mean? A: "Both" in this context is ambiguous. It could mean: (that) I have something to do in order to occupy both of us for a while or (that) I have something to do in order to occupy one of us for a while and in order to occupy the other one for a while or (that) I have something to do in order to occupy both of us or (that) I have something to do in order to occupy both of us for a long time or (that) I have something to do in order to occupy both of us for a short while In all of these uses, "both" refers to the state of the situation: at some point in the past, both of us or at some point in the future we will both be involved. In this context, "something to keep both of us busy" could either mean "something that will occupy both of us for a long time" or it could mean "something that will occupy both of us for a short time" since the sentence does not specify "the longer the better".
