Monday morning around 6:30 a.m. while driving on I-95 heading westbound, Treeple said he was shocked to see a semi-truck speeding from Cape May to New York City. "Seventeen miles per hour over the speed limit is criminal speed," he said. After all the recent natural disasters, everything is under a microscope, and speed on a major highway in Somerset County is not a priority. A person working for the Pennsylvania Transportation Department reported to Treeple that they have not received a single speeding ticket on the New Jersey portion of I-95 westbound between the Delaware Memorial Bridge and the Jersey Turnpike. "That is unreal," said Treeple. "We get these natural disasters and we all want to be socially responsible, but I-95 needs a little help." According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration's online law enforcement data, between the Delaware Memorial Bridge and the Garden State Parkway, the New Jersey side of I-95 has a total of 19,000 speeding tickets issued annually. "As you can see there was never a time that the speed limit was increased on the I-95 westbound portion," said Treeple. "I'm sure we can all agree that the rate of speed fluctuates along the highway." Treeple said he has contacted the Pennsylvania Transportation Department and pointed out the numerous speed zones in the area. "They say they are in the process of having a truck
