the teamviewer v14.0 release for windows, windows mac os x, linux, and android is licensed with a one-year premium license. after renewal, the program will be unlocked for both the initial and renewal periods, and the license key is renewed automatically. in the u.s. region, the license key is not necessarily valid for other countries. to share a session, simply select the connect button. this will open a browser where the remote person can input their user id and password. the team viewer program will automatically connect to the browser and present a remote control screen where people can start interacting. to cancel the remote control session, click on the stop button. the teamviewer team viewer program is reliable, yet resource-intensive. if you have a lot of people who need to remote control a device at the same time, it's not a good idea to run this on a single device. to overcome these limitations, the teamviewer developers offer a premium service called teamviewer online backup. if the person that is initiating the remote control session is a network services administrator, they can set up teamviewer to use a shared gateway. this is a proxy server that is installed on a single device within the network that people can use to remotely control their devices. the program developers have put a lot of effort into making the teamviewer software run smoothly on each and every system, because they recognize that something as simple as the blink of an eye is enough to make the remote control session completely unusable. 5ec8ef588b
