Histone demethylation is a dynamic epigenetic modification that controls important cellular processes during development, including cell fate decisions, maintenance of pluripotency, lineage restriction, and differentiation. We recently identified that the Jumonji C (JmjC) domain-containing histone demethylase KDM2A is required for proper gametogenesis in mouse. To further our understanding of the role of KDM2A in early vertebrate development, we identified and characterized XKDM2A, the Xenopus homolog of KDM2A. Expression of XKDM2A was detected in the early embryo and embryos injected with XKDM2A mRNA. XKDM2A was localized in the nucleus, which is similar to mouse KDM2A. By immunoprecipitation, we showed that XKDM2A forms a complex with histone H3 and H4. Inhibition of XKDM2A expression using a morpholino oligonucleotide resulted in defects in germinal vesicle breakdown and chromosome condensation, indicating that XKDM2A functions in the germinal vesicle-stage Xenopus egg extracts. Our study further validates that the JmjC domain-containing histone demethylase KDM2A plays an important role in the early embryonic development of vertebrates. When "Apple Already Has Siri," Then Why Did They Get on Stage? - rolph ===== josh2600 What the hell kind of question is that? Are we really going to act like it's a shock that Apple gets involved in creating and developing a platform? Are you kidding me? Apple made the iPod, the iPhone, the iPad, and probably the iPod Touch. I don't know if Apple has ever made anything besides those products, but they're obviously involved in some way. They're the ones making the "content" and they're the ones providing the "browsers".

FolderHighlight Review: FolderHighlight has a clean and pretty interface. Besides the lovely appearance, there is a small tool box in the top right corner of the window. On it, you can see the colored directory, tips, and a setting box. The tool box has a very simple interface. You can change the color of your folders through the small tool box. If you hover the mouse over a folder in the list, you can see the color assigned to it in the tool box. To change the assigned color, you just need to go into the Settings window. It's a simple window. The first option is to select a color. A small window shows up. Next, you can choose between your 8 defined colors. After that, you can refresh the color assignment. The next feature is the color assignment. Simply drag a folder to the window and release it. The assigned color will be applied to the folder. You can also assign a color to a sub-folder in a simple way. FolderHighlight's setup process is very simple. To install it, double-click the setup file. The installation wizard will pop up, and you just need to follow it. After finishing, FolderHighlight will appear in your Start menu. To run it, just double-click the icon. The tool includes the option to create a desktop shortcut. The shortcut will appear in your desktop, and you can move it anywhere you want. To set it, right-click the shortcut and select Properties. You can now adjust the size and the icon.

FolderHighlight's menu is very simple. When you hover the mouse over the top bar, a small menu appears, allowing you to access every function. The menu has a settings window and an info tip window. The settings window has only two options: changing the colors and adding an info tip. The color and info tip windows are quick and simple. To change the color, simply select the desired one from the top. When you select the color, a small window pops up. To change the info tip, you can select it from the popup window and write whatever you want.
